TFS Trial Form Support exceeds 300 employees

TFS Trial Form Support (TFS) has as of November 2006 exceeded 300 employees located throughout 12 countries in Europe, Japan and India. By the beginning of January 2007 the company estimates it will have 320 employees within its operations.

"I think this only reflects the current high R&D activities throughout the Life Science Industry globally, and that does definitely give the CRO business a push forward in terms of employment rates" says Mr. Daniel Spasic, Chief Executive Officer of the TFS Group.

TFS has currently 35 open positions within its affiliates across Europe mainly, and is estimating that approximately 60 new positions will join its operations by 2007. In order to secure the employments in 2007 and the coming years there will be an internal trainee program launched in spring 2007. It will include 35 trainees during 6 months of clinical research training. A number of trainees will be offered positions within TFS and some will be starting their first employments among some clients of TFS that have taken the decision to financially support the trainee program.

"We need to do something. We can't only focus on the people already in the business. We must open up our doors for all the bright and brilliant students being graduated every year from the universities and relevant educations. We hope that more companies in the sector will be able to implement such programs, or at least support us to expand and keep our program running annually" says Mr. Spasic.
